It's also the name of a Google search feature. simp Karen WAP yeet Google I feel lucky has long been a phrase used by punters before placing a bet or rolling the dice. It is used metaphorically as an expression of sincere or superstitious confidence in the random results of events. Some kind of phrase is especially associated with Harry Callahan (Clint Eastwood) in the classic 1977 western Dirty Harry. Callahan aims his gun at an enemy on the ground, his gun just out of reach, and has his enemy entertain whether his cylinder has any remaining bullets: But is this a .44 Magnum, the most powerful gun in the world and would blow your head cleanly, have you gotta ask yourself a question: Do I feel lucky? Well, does ya, punk? A popular corruption of the quote is Do You Feel Lucky, punk? I feel lucky gained popularity in another area with the launch of the Google search engine in 1998. From the search engine's beta version, Google users could enter a keyword and then press the I'm Feeling Lucky button instead of the regular search button, which would take them automatically to the first result and bypass the results page. The I'm Feeling Lucky button got its name from the word's sense of play – users effectively bet that the first result would be what they were looking for. The phrase quickly took on a Google-centric life of its own, showing up in employee tell-all book titles as well as in the title of a Google Assistant trivia game show. Since the feature's release, I feel lucky have in some cases started referring to the mechanics of the Google button. @POTUS looks like kinda guy who types porn boobs in google then hits I feel lucky tab. @JohnSheedyJr, January 2018 Went to Kmart and somehow got free crazy bread, then went to Pepe's and got a free chicken burrito!!! Choose your three favorite badges, or press the randomization button if you're feeling lucky. Android, BuzzFeed, November WAP jeet In modern use, players and Googlers are not the only ones who say (or click) that they feel lucky. The phrase enjoys general, everyday use in speech and writing as a serious, nervous, or ironic presentiment of hope for a positive outcome when taking a risk. It is often qualified by time or circumstance (eg I feel lucky today or I feel lucky this time). I feel lucky, punk is sometimes used as a riff on or attraction to the Dirty Harry quote. Be aware that getting lucky is a euphemism for having intercourse. This is not meant as a formal definition of I feel lucky as most terms we define on Dictionary.com, but is rather an informal word summary that hopefully touches on the most important aspects of the meaning and use of I feel lucky that will help our users extend their word mastery. Today one of my students was very surprised to discover that one of her favorite songs of Daft Punk (Get Lucky) wasn't really about luck, but rather about sex. I did a quick google search and every translation I found in Portuguese and Spanish completely missed the real meaning of the song. They all translated it literally to have luck or to do well, but the common everyday definition of GET LUCKY is to have sex. Getting some also means having sex. The chorus repeats itself over and over again: She's up all night' to the sun (so as not to sleep) I'm up all night to get some (have sex) She's up all night for good fun I'm up all night to be lucky (have sex) To learn more about Get Lucky, Get Some, and 38 more ways to say Have Sex , Check out 40 ways to say SEX: Synonyms, Slang and Collocation.
